

Travel Tips

NO MORE LEAKY TOILETRIES

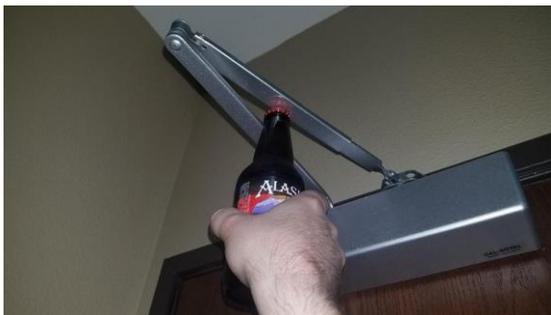

None of us like traveling with toiletries at risk of leaking or exploding in our bag. But you can fix this easily by taking a small plastic bag and screwing it under the cap of your shampoo or soap bottle. That way, all leaks will be prevented.

KEY CARD TIP

Do you always get annoyed with having to put your key in the room key card slot in order to turn on your lights? Worry no more, because actually, any card will do. Just take your used metro card or anything else of the same size, stick it in the slot, and keep it in there for constant electricity access.

BOTTLE OPENER

Sometimes, you might feel like cracking open a cold one in your hotel room. But what if there is no bottle opener to be found? You can still enjoy a relaxing evening! Just look at the door closer, it works like magic, and you will wonder why you were even bothered with regular openers.

NO MORE GERMS

Legend has it that the dirtiest thing in a hotel room is the remote control. Almost everything else is normally cleaned, and the bedsheets are changed, but this item is always the same. Therefore, it's best to cover it with a plastic bag or a shower cap from the bathroom. Germaphobes will be grateful for this hack.

NO MORE NOISE

You might be staying in a busy hotel, especially if you're traveling in high seasons like summer. Sometimes, the walls are just too thin, and people can be loud during vacation. You might not be able to switch rooms either. So, the best you can do is take an extra towel and wedge it between the crack by the door. This will help significantly.

A HACK FOR THE DOOR

If you have a lot of luggage, it can get pretty annoying to travel back and forth. Luckily, if the door is near the closet, you can use a hanger to hook the door and keep it open while you try to settle in. Just make sure no one walks into your room in the process.

COMPLETE DARKNESS

When you are in an unfamiliar place, you might have trouble sleeping, especially if the lights of this new city are too bright. Most of the time, you won't be able to arrange the curtains so there is no gap in between. However, you just need to grab the pants hangers from the closet and press the drapes with the clips to keep them shut.

NEVER PUT YOUR BAGS ON THE BED

Unfortunately, bed bugs are one of those things that come along with constant travelings. These critters are even worse than mosquitoes, and they can catch a ride back to your house through your luggage. Therefore, it's best to keep them by the bathroom. Then, check out the bed, the chairs, or the couch in the room. Do it even if you're at a 5-star hotel.

THE SHOWER CAP IS IMPORTANT

If you forgot to bring bags, you can keep your dirty shoes inside them to avoid damaging your clothes. They can also be used to cover the remote control if you're afraid that it might be too dirty.

